Ignes Speculatorii:

OR,

CONSIDERATIONS

Upon the Use of

BEACONS.

In a LETTER from Dublin to the B---p of B---r.

Ardet _____de Vertice Lampas

LONDON,

Printed by H. P. for J. MORPHEW, near Stationers-Hall. MDCCXVIII.

OR NEIDERAT

BELLONNS

eQ rest ASTTTE

Marin California

B

Ma

the Top Sign

-

CONSIDERATIONS

Upon the Use of,

BEACONS, &c.

May it please your L-p,

N case of the sudden Invasion of any Part of the King's Dominions, a very commendable Method obtain'd in the Days of Yore, of alarming the Country by lighting up of Fires on the Tops of Hills, and eminent Places, as Signals of an approaching Enemy. In Imitation of which good Old Custom, the A 2 Mayor

Mayor of a certain Maritime Town (at the time of the late Rebellion) gave Orders for the firing of a couple of Barrels of Pitch upon the Top of the Castle, as a Token that the Pretender was within a few Leagues of Landing upon that Coast; and that his Squadron seem'd to make directly into their Harbour. Ships indeed that occasion'd this Combustion, proved to be a Fleet of laden Colliers; yet cannot I for the Life of me accuse the then Ruler of that District as an unprovident Person, or ridicule his remarkable Circumspection and Forecast, as a fruitless Precaution. On the contrary, when he deliver'd up his Accounts at the End of his Mayoralty, no one more willingly allow'd the fame than my felf. Not one fingle Article did I dispute; no not the very Five Pound which he had charged for Beaconage. Tho' I must confess, I understood not the Import of that Word, till I casually observ'd that he had unfolded the mysterious Term in an Explanatory Note on the Margin of his Book; where these

the

foo tha ho An bei but bre a t in upo late Can cou his his by: all for ner any of t

gal

he

ers

of s a n a hat

to

The

on-

den

me t as

re-

caft,

con-

Ac-

alty,

ame

ticle

Five

Bea-

der-

till

lded

atory

here

thele

these Words were written, An Expence for Pitch to alarm the Country.

There was but one fawning, stumpfooted, canting old Sot of an Alderman, that shewed the least Uneasiness at the honest well-meaning Mayor's Accounts. And this same dissatisfied Grumbletonian, being aPerson that generally talk'd much, but little to the Purpose; at length broke Silence; and, after the manner of a true Hypocrite, began his Harangue in a foft and tickling kind of Panegyrick upon the general good Conduct of our late Governour; thank'd him for his great Care of the Corporation; for the Encouragement he had given to Vertue, by his own exemplary Behaviour, and for his discouraging of Vice and Profaneness, by putting the Laws in Execution against all obstinate and enormous Offenders: for his Vigilance in suppressing of all manner of Tumults and Infurrections, when any fuch threaten'd the Peace and Quiet of the Neighbourhood; and for his frugal Management of the Publick Cash, or or Town-Stock, that had pass'd through his Hands during the time of his being in Office. But in the End, all this Hony was turn'd into something else; into something that was of the same Colour indeed, but of a quite different Nature, and Taste, and Smell, as one might partly guess by the Steam it sent forth. The pretended Dove began to shew that he had a Gall: His Feathers had Edges keen enough to have slit a Man's Gullet; and, notwithstanding the oily Words of this old Smooth-boots, it plainly appear'd that he had Swords and War in his Heart.

In short, after he had flourish'd a confiderable while upon the excellent Qualities of the late Mayor, he fell by degrees to Threats, and at last to down right Scolding, and calling of Names: And all this, as far we cou'd perceive, upon the sole Account of the Article of Beaconage. For God's sake Sir (said he) why was all this Waste made? Why must you needs light up two Barrels of Pitch,

Pi tu Bl Pe of Ca fo ish you Inc. The Per fett

Sple tim Frat cil, Me

tex

and

For he h is

n

24

0 ur

e, ht

h.

at

ges

t;

of.

r'd

his

on-

ua-

de-

nwo

nes:

eive,

e of

he)

Why

ls of

itch,

Pitch, when one might have ferv'd the turn? Sure you was minded to make a Blaze sufficient to frighten all the good People in the Neighbourhood, instead of calling them in to our Affistance, in Case the Chevalier had in reality been so near our Coyy-holds as you foolishly imagin'd. Therefore let me tell you Mr. Wiseacre (continued he) That fuch a Goofe-cap as you ought in my Judgment to be punish'd as a Publick Incendiary; or at least be Prosecuted at the common Expence, as a suspicious Person, and as one who had Designs of fetting the Town on Fire under the Pretext, forfooth, of Acting for it's Defence and Security.

This scurrilous Deportment of the Splenetick Old Gentleman began by this time to stir the Choler of the whole Fraternity of Aldermen, Common-Council, Constables, and all the worthy Members of that ancient Body-Corporate. For by some sarcastical Expressions which he had let fall, they found Themselves too

ar

be fic

th in

hi

T

ar

C

za

the

Ch

OL

OU

ly

all

ly

to

Na

Go

too fensibly reflected upon; and that their own Reputations were wounded thro' the fides of the late Mayor. They remonstrated in their turns how Obnoxious he had made himself to the whole Body by his Ill-conduct, and uncharitable Surmizes in the Affair under their present Consideration. And how flagrantly (even before his Admission as a Member) he had Vilified and Defamed the ancient Rights and Priviledges of the Town. How, at the same time, he left no Stone unturn'd to Advance himself to some Publick Station in the Corporation; which at long run he happily effected, and by his fawning and cringing, and time-ferving Tricks, got They rehimself chosen Alderman. minded him of his insolent Carriage after his Election; and of his transgressing the Rules of Charity, by Mifrepresenting the Words and Actions of the whole Brotherhood in general, and more particularly of the honest Gentleman, whose Accounts they had now before them. And in the Conclusion unanimously Voted liat led

or.

ow

the

under

wor

Tion

De-

lges

ime,

ance

the

hap-

and

got after

g the

nting

vhole

parti-

whose hem.

Voted

re-

and unworthy to wear the Robes that belong'd to him as a Badge of his Office. And having maturely considered the good Intentions, and honest Meaning of the Defendant, not only allow'd his Bill for Beaconage, but gave him the Thanks of the House for the Vigilence and Care he had shewn thro' the whole Course of his Mayoralty.

Upon this there ensued a general Huzza, in token of the Approbation of all the unprejudiced Spectators. And, the Chairman having dismiss'd the Assembly, Old Hunks was obliged to sneak off without Replying to the Charge; having only the ill-natured Satisfaction of cursing all his Opponents, and swearing Bloodily that he wou'd use all his Interest to have their Charter taken from them; Nay, tho' he was sure to lose his own Gown and Freedom by the Bargain.

Methinks by this time I behold your L----p turning up the Whites of your

B Phari-

[ 10]

Pharifaical Goglers with a feeming Indignation against, and a more than ordinary Concern at the Conduct of the vile Hypocritical Wretch here before Us.

Never make any wonder at it Man;

You are the very Person who thus cry out with the utmost Rage against all who have the Zeal to oppose your darling Latitudinarian Principles. You palpably Invade our Religious Rights; and yet if the Convocation, a Snape, a Law, a Sherlock, a Cockburn, a Trapp, a Cannon, or any honest Clergyman or Layman is at the Expence of lighting up a Beacon as a Signal of an approaching Enemy, what a Coil do you keep! How do you Thunder out your Anathemas, your Bruta Fulmina; and Curse all that stand in your way by Bell, Book, and Candle.

Nor

Wi

L

the

Co

the

to

Po

So

by

WO

fho

ear

mu

ress

the

tim

c!ap

thei

ing

Nor are you content to disturb the Repose of his Majesty's Liege-People with your Own Works alone, with those I mean that bear your awful Name in their Titles; but when any doughty Combatant has the Assurance to mount the Stage in your Behalf, you fail not to Halloo him on with Prefaces and Postscripts of an unconscionable Length. So that if one might guess at their Use by the vastness of their Dimension, one wou'd imagine you design'd them for Winding-Sheets in case any of your Seconds should fall in the Consist.

But are these Heroes of yours in good earnest such terrible Creatures that they must be stroked, and sooth'd, and cares'd, for fear they should turn upon their Keeper? Or are they such bashful timorous Souls that you are forced to clap them on their Backs, and spit in their Mouths in order to raise their sinking Spirits?

B 2

HOY Keels

Nor

11-

r-

he

re

cry

all

lar-

pal-

and

aws

non,

man

acon

emy,

do

mas,

all

look,

You seem hereby, in my humble Opinion, to Copy after some of our famous Cock-Matchers. And, if a favourite Jewel is to enter the Lists, you set him down upon the Pit with a Bonne Grace, and a long Preface serves as a Presude to the ensuing Combat. When the Battle is ended, if you find he has proved a Good Heeler, you are no less ready to sound your Trumpet in a tedious and unharmonious Postcript: Et ita insulsiffimis Labris quasi Podicem illius deoscularis.

At other times (as if you had quite lost the Eyes of your Understanding) you Act the Part of a Blind Cock; and Peck, and Sparr, and Flusker at every thing that does but touch you: And, like Ragotin's Turn-Style, deal your undistinguishing Blows with equal Fury amongst Priends and Enemies; and if the Passenger takes not a more than ordinary care, this Ten to One but he receives a Thump on the Guts that shall make him keck.

A

for

Th

hea

Ic

non

ma

Par

and

Per

Har

Me

fore

wit

Str

nau

low

Sto

And

Wri

plac

Lig

larg

Ofa-

rite

him

ace.

ude

the

oro-

ady

and elfif-

aris.

uite

you

eck,

hing

Ra-

ftin-

ngst

ssen-

care, s a

nake

A

A fair Opportunity here offers it felf for numerous Citations out of your late Theological Pieces to make good this heavy Charge. Works of Theology did I call them! Forgive the heedless Mifnomer: For an ordinary Ballad-Singer may with equal Confidence put off his Party-Songs and Madrigals for Anthems, and spiritual Hymns. Your Sophisticate Performances are in almost every Body's Hands, and have sufficiently tired both Me and all your Readers: I shall therefore forbear spoiling any more Paper with odious Repetitions of fuch fulfome Stuff. For I am sensible it wou'd be as naufeous an Undertaking, as the fwallowing a Bolus a fecond time after the Stomach had discharged it once already. And we know of a certain Persons Writings which, notwithstanding we place them in the most advantageous Light, do still appear to be but one large Blot of Iniquity.

[[14]]

Methinks those Gentlemen who under- do t take to write Answers to some of your Repl 1 b's Labours have a more difagreeable Provience to go through than the Maîtres des Boffes-Ocuvrespion Gagers of Vaults; who, tho' employ'd in the basest Occupation upon Batth, yet meet now and then with a Watch or a Piece of Gold to make them Jome small Amends for the Pains they are at in keeping the rest of Mankind Sweet, and Clean, and free from Infection I cannot but acknowledge that the highest Commendations are due to the Publick Spiritedness of those excellent Persons abovenamed, who employ some of their leifure Hours in the offensive Drudgery of fearching into the Excrements of your Brains, in order to prepare proper Antidotes for the Poison they are sure to meet with. But I must own it even grieves me to the very Heart to think how fadly they bedawb themselves with raking into fo much Dirt, and Mud, and Nasti-And yet, alas! after all their trouble a cried herel

tans

A lengt Max Righ War Ance fore their he co Iwil and or mo Stre bour him. and i well for his

ble

ble and Pains, what strange Treatment der- do they meet with in your L-p's your Replys? Their best Prescriptions are dedifa-cried as Quack-Récipes, and themselves than hereby abused as a Company of Charla-Ga-tans and Empericks. of being overtum'd in my Chair by

d in

ble

And what, my good L ____d, have you at yet or a length quite forgot your once darling mall Maxim, That whoever attacks us in our in Rights and Priviledges, is in a State of and War withous, and may be treated as our can Ancestors did the Wolves that heretosheft fore infested our Country; or as We, blick their Progeny do a mad Dog, whenever rions he comes in our Way ? For once then their I will confess my self of your L--'s Mind; igery and will grant you, that when a mad Dog, your mad any thing else, is broke loose into our Anti-Streets, all the good People in the Neighmeet bourhood ought to be up in Arms against rieves him. And if Canes, and Oaken-Plants and Paring-Shovels will not stop him in his Career, I shall no longer blame any Vasti- well-meaning Vulcan, who, in his Zeal for the Weal-Publick shall leave his trou-Forge, Forge, and run out of his Shop with a red bot Iron in his Fift to oppose the foaming Cur that has thus put all the Parishioners into a bodily Pear. Or, shou'd I chance at any time to pals along the Streets, and find my felf in Danger of being overturn'd in my Chair by some intoxicated Ruffian; I shall for the future readily excuse my Footman, tho' he should exert himself in a more than ordinary Zeal in the Defence of his Mafter. I am confident, that upon the like Occasion, your L-p (notwithstanding all your pretended Moderation) wou'd fecretly commend the Fellow's Courage and Honefty, tho his Looks, and Words, and Blows shou'd shew him to be Heated beyond his usual Temper; nay, tho' he should not only cudgel, and foundly bafte the Roafting-Pieces of the Aggreffor, but also singe his Beard, and Whiskers, and Perriwig with his Flambeau.

upon one Man's Back, says your L-p?
I might here, not improperly, make the Shovels will not flup him in fan did Co The the you

Ho

have gine Social new was and ence he fithat Ask and appland fmal his S feen

Ben

th a

the

the

Or,

long

nger

ome

ture

' he

or-

Ma-

like

ding

vou'd

urage

fords,

leated

no' he

undly

ggref

Whif-

be all

au.

same Reply as a late Person of Quality did to his Valet-de Chambre, upon a Complaint he made to his Lordship; That be was hated by all the Servants in the Family: How the P-x then have you Behav'd your self, replied his Honour.

Pluck up a good Heart Man; you have more Friends than perhaps you imagine. And so long as there are Deists, Socinians, and Free-Thinkers in the Land, never make your felf uneafy, as if you was in Danger of wanting Advocates and Admirers. And if one happens to encounter a Dissenter of any Denomination, he shall not fail to espouse the Cause of that Good Man the B-p of B-r. Ask him how he likes your late Sermon and Defences, and he shall immediately applaud your wonderful Performances; and will tip the Wink as if he had no small Hopes of your speedy Conversion to his Sect. A Quaker, not many Days ago, seem'd almost cock-sure of his Friend - p ? Ben: He had observ'd (as he told the se the Comfame Company) through the dark Fogs of your cloudy Labours a kind of glimmering Light to break forth; and, notwithstanding your present Obscurity, had hourly Expectations of your Illumination.

If the Friends shou'd not be balk'd in their Expectations (and who knows how far the Devil may tempt one?) Remember, before the Time comes, that Purity of Spirit does not confift in a Sanctify'd Look or Habit: And that to be extrinfically conspicuous, is by no means a certain Symbol of intrinsical Excellence. No! for the blackest Fiend is still a Wicked Spirit, tho' he may shine a while in the borrow'd Lustre and dazling Form of an Angel of Light. As the Devil that looks over Lincoln-College was still an ugly Monster with Tail, and Horns, and cloven Feet, notwithstanding his being New-whiten'd against the Publick Act; tho' I doubt not but he was more stared at upon the Account of his Light Colour'd Suit, than if he had continu'd in his old Original Black Livery.

But

to

Ie

tha

mi

yo

Pe

plo

Br

a

fli

ha

tha

up

w

the

the

me

But without all Question, you begin to think me insufferably tedious; and that I exceed the Bounds of an Epistle. Be that as it will, I have your L——p's Permission to abound in my own Sense, as you do in yours. And the Liberty of the Pen, tho' never so scandalously misemploy'd, is in some Peoples Opinion, A Branch of the Liberty of the Subject.

I shall take Leave of your L—p with a Petition, That you will be pleas'd to fling this into the Fire as scon as you have perused it; out of a fond Opinion that I shall hereby see my self placed upon the same Foot with those Writers who acquire a high Price and Value to their Works, upon the sole Account of their being burnt by the Common H—man.

I am, without Postcript,

Or further Ceremony,

Your L---ps, &c.

J. S.

But

your

ring

and-

urly

d in

how

iem-

Puri-

ify'd

rinsi-

cer-

ence.

Vick-

le in

m of that

1 an

and being

AEt;

tared

lour'd

sold

Dublin Feb. 10th 1717.

ARCHARARARARA EBEBEBEBEBEBEB

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Just Publist'd.

A Brief Consideration of two Passages in the Bishop of Bangor's Answer to the Committee, One about the Usefulness of Learning: The other of the Magistrates Business equally to encourage Men of all Denominations in Religion. By a Gentleman of Oxford.

THE Vulgar Prepossessions in favour of the Bishop of Bangor, candidly and impartially Considered. With a particular Account of his Lordship's Candour towards the Committe and Others. Humbly Dedicated to the Reverend Gentlemen of the Committe. Price Six-Pence.

Both Sold by J. Morphew, near Stationers-

通

S.

the s of Bu-

ar of and cular vards Dedi-Com-oners-